

MARYLAND GAZETTE.

Annapolis, Thursday, October 7.

Being disappointed in not receiving paper from Baltimore, we have been obliged to issue the Gazette on a half sheet.

COMMUNICATED.

On Monday last, by the direction of the Executive Department of this State, our Flag was hoisted half mast high, and thirteen minute guns were fired in honour to the memory of Commodore O. H. Perry.

This small tribute to departed merit is but a faint emblem of the feelings entertained by our Executive, in union with those of their fellow citizens, on an event so melancholy, and much to be deplored, as the loss of the gallant Hero of Erie. Let his country, while she mourns her late in being deprived of one of her brightest sons, not forget to encourage others to emulate his worth.

From the Baltimore Morning Chronicle.

Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry.

One of our naval heroes, and the first in the annals of American history who gained a victory where fleet was opposed to fleet, has now paid the debt of nature. OLIVER HAZARD PERRY, is no more! There seems something so great in a character, however illustrious, until it receives the consecration of death. However eminent a man may be for his talents or for his virtues—distinguished by his public or private services—luminous with intellect, renowned for bravery, or adorned by the less dazzling, but more endearing qualities of the heart; however much beloved by his friends or idolized by his country, respected both at home and abroad, still while he lives, envy will attempt to pull him down from the lofty position of public admiration which forms his pedestal, to the humble platform on which he stands. But when death touches with his wand of ebony a character so resplendent—when it is converted as by magic into dust and ashes, and seems to implore nothing but a few feet of earth to moulder away in quietude and in silence, while the cold dews of night hang over his head, and nothing but insensate marble marks the spot where he slumbers—envy shrinks with abhorrence from the sanctuary of the dead, and death canonizes and consecrates the character. It is then, and then only, that the virtues begin to gleam and to twinkle with a star-like radiance, through the interposing shadows of the tomb—they then shine from their proper sphere; they are set beyond human reach in the broad expanding and over-arching firmament of fame.

We hope that the following slight biographic sketch of the departed hero, drawn from the most authentic source, will not be deemed uninteresting. Oliver Hazard Perry, was the son of Christopher Raymond Perry, and was born in Newport, Rhode Island, on the 23d of August, 1785. His father had borne an honourable part both by sea and land, in the revolutionary battles of his country; he was from his maternal side, descended in a direct line from Sir William Pitt, so renowned in the history of Scotland. In April 1799, he received a midshipman's warrant, and was attached to the United States ship Gen. Green, under the command of his father, until the reduction of the navy. On the breaking out of the Tripolitan war, he was ordered to join the Adams, commanded by captain Campbell, with whom he continued until commodore Preble was succeeded by commodore Morris, when he returned in the frigate N. York to the United States, during which cruise he was promoted to an acting lieutenant. In 1804, under his old commander captain Campbell of the Constitution, he joined our squadron at Malta, where he remained until by orders of that officer he entered as first lieutenant on board of the Nautilus, to which vessel he was attached until commodore Rodgers assumed the command of the squadron. He remained in this station until the conclusion of the peace with Tripoli, when the commodore shifted his flag from the Constitution to the Essex, and took Oliver Hazard Perry with him to the United States in the capacity of second lieutenant. During the embargo, he was appointed to the command of 17 gun boats then lying at Newport—and in 1810, he succeeded captain Jones in the command of the United States schooner Revenge, attached to the squadron of commodore Rogers, lying at N. W. London. This schooner was lost off the port above mentioned, a court of inquiry investigated all the facts of the case, by whom the conduct of the commanding officer was highly applauded—his cool and intrepid conduct on that occasion endeared him more than ever to the cabinet. On the breaking out of the late war with Great Britain, he was ordered to take the command of the United States flotilla lying at Newport; and in February, he was appointed with the rank of master commandant to the command of the United States naval forces on Lake Erie.

Here we deem it needless to pursue him further—what follows is now matter of American history—he stands in the full sunlight of glory—the admiration of his countrymen constitutes his best panegyric; his bravery during that perilous engagement for the acquisition of victory, could only be rivalled by his humanity to the vanquished afterwards. This is an event that will not be forgotten; he has made the waves of that mighty lake the rolling monuments of his glory. With regard to the softer, the more delicate, the domestic affections—those that shun the blaze of public admiration and court privacy and shade, those that may be denominated the tendrils of the human heart, they wound themselves around all his sturdy and independent qualities—the grandeur of the oak was enlivened and decorated by the blossoms and the fragrance of the woodbine that enfolded its trunk, and crept in spiral ringlets around its branches. But of what avail is glory—the same destroying angel that now hovers over Baltimore, has made the victory her victim.

He has denied him even the sad privilege of a grave in the land of his ancestry—neither his family, his widow, his friends, nor his countrymen can point out his tomb to the inquiring stranger, and say, here slumber the ashes of the Hero of Erie.

Fame as she walked the zodiac, call'd aloud,
The name of PERRY from her silver cloud.
Her voice in music stole upon his ear,
Hero of Erie take your station here!
He saw the glorious vision crown'd with rays;
He saw her vestment twinkling in the blaze.
His soul delighted, burst its mortal frame,
And soar'd resplendent to the call of Fame.

His remains were interred at Port Spain, in the Island of Trinidad, on the 24th ult. and were attended to the grave with every mark of attention and respect on the part of the governor (Sir Ralph Woodford) the Civil and Military Authorities, and the inhabitants of the town in general. At 4 o'clock P. M. the 3d West India Regiment was marched to the King's wharf to receive the corpse, and about five o'clock, the boat, with the body, left the John Adams, that ship firing minute guns until its arrival at the wharf, when Fort St. Andrew commenced the same ceremony, which continued until the procession reached the burying ground. The following was the order of Procession:

The Chief of Police, and his Deputy.

The 3d West India Regiment, with arms reversed—the officers with white scarfs and hat bands.

The band of the regiment, playing the Dead March in Saul.

The Commandant of the Garrison and his Staff, with scarfs and hats.

Two Alcades de Barrios.

THE CORPSE.

Six Officers on horseback, as bearers.

CHIEF MOURNERS.

The Officers of the John Adams and Nonsuch, two and two.

A great number of respectable inhabitants, as mourners, two and two.

One hundred and twenty men of the crews of the John Adams and Nonsuch, two and two.

On arriving at the entrance to the burying ground, the troops filed off, and formed a line for the procession to pass through. The Funeral Service was performed by the Rev. Mr. Clapham, in a solemn and impressive manner, and after the body was committed to the grave the troops fired three volleys of musketry, in the usual manner—the whole body of the attendants on the funeral retiring from the burying ground with every mark of sympathetic grief for the premature death of a gallant man and a good parent and citizen, increased by the consideration of his eminent rank in society. He has left a widow and four children (who reside in Newport, Rhode Island,) to deplore his untimely fate, by whom, and his brother officers, he will long be remembered with love and regret.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

In consequence of the death of the gallant Commodore OLIVER H. PERRY, of the United States Navy, at Port Spain, in the Island of Trinidad, on the 23d August last, a circular letter was, we understand, immediately issued by the Navy Department, addressed to the several Commanding Naval Officers, Commandant of Navy Yards, and the Commandants of Marines, requiring them, respectively, upon receipt of the said circular, to pay the usual tributes of respect to the memory of the illustrious officer deceased, by noisting the flags at half mast, firing minute guns, and causing the officers attached to their respective commands to wear crape on the left arm during the space of thirty days.

Norfolk, Sept. 25.

We are happy to learn, by the John Adams, (says the Norfolk Beacon) that the affairs of the Patriots in Venezuela are in a most prosperous and flourishing condition. General Bolivar had seized upon a pass communicating with New Grenada, from which section of country he expected great support. Barcelona had fallen into their hands, and troops to reinforce them were constantly arriving from England. General Atamendi, the distinguished defender of Maragatta, had lately been tried by a court martial at Bogota; the result had not transpired.
